Hanging Prosecutor Dies In Spray Of Bullets

MACHINE GUN USED TO TAKE LIFE FROM WILLIAM M'SWIGGIN

Gangsters Drive Up To Lawyer's Car Then Open Fire

SEVERAL MOTIVES ARE DISCUSSED

The Young Attorney Had Turned Down Huge Bribe

(Associated Press)

CHICAGO, April 28—William H. McSwiggin, youthful assistant states attorney known as the "hanging prosecutor," because of his zeal in conducting criminal trials was slain last night in a blast of machine gun fire poured by gangsters into an automobile in which he and three other men were riding.

Two of his companions also were killed. They were: James J. Doherty, reputed leader of beer runners of Cicero, a suburb, and Thomas. Duffy, owner of a saloon.

The hail of lead came from an automobile which drew up beside the car in which McSwiggin and his companions were driving in Roosevelt Road at 58th avenue on the boundary line between Chicago and Cicero.

While authorities were delving in a maze of possible motives for the shooting, John Stege, veteran captain of detectives, said that the assistant prosecutor was marked for death because of his prosecution of John Sealie and Albert. Anselmi, Genna gangsters, under sentence to fourteen years in prison for the slaying of two policemen.

The word was passed along the line that he was on his way to Cicero, plans were quickly made and the slayers with their machine guns were seen on the scene, Captain Stege asserted.

In connection with this theory, the Chicago Tribune said that only two days ago McSwiggin had told a reporter for that paper that he had been offered $30,000 to neglect his duty and aid the two gunmen in gaining their freedom.

Search for the slayers began immediately under the direction of States Attorney Robert E. Crowe, who declared he was astounded at the timidity of the killers.

Three men who found Duffy lying mortally wounded near the scene of the shooting were held early today for further questioning.

McSwiggin and his companions were driving toward Chicago when the car which had been following them drew alongside to place a machine gun in range. After the first volley the occupants of the attacked car deserted their machine and as they ran away were sprayed with bullets. Duffy fell and died several hours later in a hospital.

A mile and a half from the scene the bodies of McSwiggin and Doherty were found. The police believed that the fleeing car was overtaken, but whether the victims were given their death wounds in their own car or in that of the attackers was a matter of speculation. Indications were that McSwiggin had put up a desperate struggle to escape or overpower his captors.

The fate of the fourth member of the McSwiggin party is a mystery. McSwiggin left his home last night with Duffy, telling relatives that he planned to go to Berlin, another western suburb for a game of cards.

BAPTISTS EXPECT TO BEGIN BUILDING IN NEXT SIXTY DAYS

Handsome New Church Soon To Be Under Construction

MASS MEETING CALLED SUNDAY

Plans Will Be Made Known To The Congregation

Central Baptist church construction work will be underway within the next sixty days.

Following a joint meeting of the Board of Deacons and the Building Committee of Central Baptist church held in the church parlors Tuesday evening, it was decided to call a mass meeting of the church membership next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at which time all members are expected to be present to hear reports of the work of the executive committee. A thorough explanation of plans for the raising of funds for the construction as well as a statement upon how the work will be conducted will be given to the membership by Baptist leaders. W. R. Spight and Pastor W. P. Reeves will conduct the Sunday morning service. Cards are being mailed to all the membership, while the public is likewise invited to attend the Sunday parlay.

Members of the executive committee and of the board of Deacons expressed satisfaction at the results of last night's meeting and believe that the congregation will accept the outlined plan as drawn by the executive committee.

Plans for the new building were on display at Matlock's Cash Store during the past week, causing considerable enthusiasm not only within the Baptist congregation, but likewise from members of other churches who realize the tremendous benefit to be derived in both cities in increased church interest through the building of the handsome edifice.

Terror Spreads As Church Is Burned

(Associated Press) HARTLEY, Del., April 28—Terror of a suspected incendiary in this little Delaware town reached its climax today when the Methodist Episcopal church was burned 15 minutes after a cordon of guards had patrolled the building. It was the second attempt on the church and the eighth unexplained fire in three weeks. State police and firemen were on patrol duty. A suspect, previously arrested in connection with the fires was safely in the Hartley jail when the church was burned.

Lights in Hartley homes rarely are extinguished and on recent nights lanterns have been hung in trees in surrounding woods while patrols have gone through the town.

Good Crowds Hear Pastor E. F. Olive

Good crowds are attending the revival services at Southside Baptist church. Services are being conducted by Rev. E. Floyd Olive, pastor. Many visitors have been attending each service and it is the opinion of the membership that at the close the campaign will have proved one of the most successful ever held in the cities.

HUSBAND SLAYS HIS SICK WIFE AND THEN TURNS GUN ON SELF

Wife Dies Hours Later With Mate's Corpse at Her Side

SON BELIEVES PARENT DEMENTED

Younger Chappell Recalls Statement Made By His Father

(Associated Press)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 28.—Francis M. Chappell, 67, millwright, fatally shot his sick wife, Mrs. Clara Chappell, 62, in the head and then ended his life by turning the weapon on himself at their home here today.

The tragedy was discovered by a son, J. M. Chappell, who went to the home to inquire about his mother's condition.

Worry over his mother's condition who has been ill for sometime is believed by the son to have been the cause.

The son told police that he found his father dead in bed beside his mother who was still alive but who died a few hours later. A revolver was clutched in his father's hand, young Chappell said.

In explaining the case to the coroner the son said his mother had been in ill health for some months and it had preyed on his father's mind. He recalled a recent conversation in which his father told of his worry over his wife's condition and remarked: "I don't know how I can stand it much longer."

This, Mr. Chappell said, was his only clue to the motive for his father's act which he believed was done while he was temporarily demented.

The weapon used was a new one of cheap make.

Mr. Chappell said he had never seen it before and did not know his father possessed it and police expressed the view that Chappell purchased it for the purpose.

After an examination, the coroner said he would hold an inquest later.

Southern Glee Is Here Tonight

NEWSPAPER EDITORS from all over will soon attend the 41st annual meeting of the National Editorial association. They will see many interesting things, from high mountains to fertile lands below the ocean's level, from movie wonders that came with this century, to giant trees that were old and far up toward the sky when Caesar dragged vercingetorix behind his chariot.

NOTHING that the editors see will impress them as will California's magnificent public schools, not even roads that are the finest in the world.

Those schools are roads to success and happiness for millions of young minds. No land in the world can compare with California in the beauty and magnificence of public schools, none excels California in teaching.

SYSTEMATIC PLANS FOR CHARITY WORK WILL BE EXPLAINED

Kiwanians To Speak At Fifteen Churches On Next Sunday

EDWARDS TALKS OF THE PURPOSE

Duplications Will Be Avoided Through Distribution

Kiwanians have been delegated to appear in Albany-Decatur churches Sunday to explain the Co-related Charities program.

Representatives of the Albany-Decatur Kiwanis club will speak in local churches Sunday, explaining the Co-related Charities plan as sponsored by the club, it was stated today by Noble R. Edwards, chairman of the committee, and prominent local pastor. The following Kiwanians will speak in the designated churches:

First Methodist—Clyde Hendrix. First Presbyterian—A. A. Jones. Decatur Baptist—W. W. Fussell. Central Methodist—C. J. Randolph. Central Baptist—W. M. Bailey. Westminster Presbyterian—M. R. Rankin.

Church of Christ—H. L. Peterson. Church of God—D. D. Burleson. Ninth Street Methodist—J. W. Clopton.

Southside Baptist—T. M. Dix. Willoughby Presbyterian—Lamar Penney.

Episcopal—Dr. B. F. Austin. First Christian—J. B. Harlow. Westside Presbyterian—Henry Hartung.

First Baptist, Albany—S. H. Malone.

The purpose of the Co-related Charities drive, as explained at a recent meeting of the Kiwanis by Rev. Edwards, is primarily to prevent duplication of charity work among the various civic, religious, and charity organizations in the cities. It was the opinion of Rev. Edwards that appropriated sums of money can be made more useful through systematic work rather than allowing each organization to work individually.

The plan has been presented to the Kiwanis club and met with unanimous approval of club members.

KIWANIS TO MEET

Albany-Decatur Kiwanis club will meet Thursday at the noon hour at the Y. M. C. A. M. R. Rankin, secretary, urged today that every Kiwanian attend the meeting as an unusual program of business is to come before the membership.

California's Schools. Poor Little Lambs. Blue Eyes and Brown.

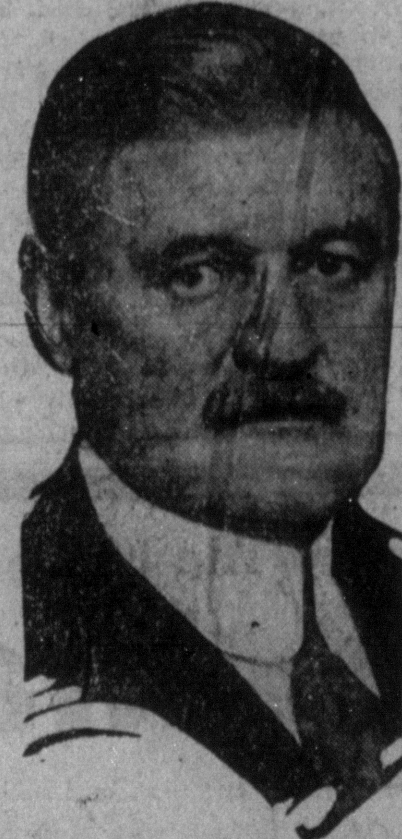

IN PASADENA, where this is written, there is a high school that for architectural beauty and for the beauty of the park around it would put to shame a majority of Europe's great palaces.

GREAT CITIES and small towns have schools that would amaze and humiliate other states in the union. Driving 600 miles through California within the last forty-eight hours, this writer saw in every considerable community from Azusa and Clermont, near Los Angeles, to Brawley in the South, magnificent schools on the main highways. Each with a park around it, perfect schools and playgrounds for all the children.

THERE, to the glory of California.

BOAT CAPSIZES AND LITTLE ONES DIE IN SWIRLING CURRENT

Respiratory Efforts Fail To Save Life of Eldest

GIRL'S BODY IS NOT RECOVERED

Dynamite To Be Put In Use To Find Missing Body

(Associated Press)

DEMOPOLIS, Ala., April 28.—Jasper H. James Edward, 8, and Edith Jewell, 5, children of David Miller, farmer were drowned at six o'clock this morning in the Warrior river at old Arcola plantation, eight and one half miles from Demopolis as the children with their father and a negro fisherman, Will Nixon, were visiting a net in the river.

The bodies of Jasper and James Edward were recovered by nine o'clock. Frantic efforts to locate the body of the little girl are in progress, by searching parties which are patrolling the river banks far below the accident. Dynamite will be used also to attempt to bring the body to the surface.

The efforts of rescue parties of Demopolis to resuscitate the two boys were without avail although artificial respiration was tried for an hour in an effort to revive Jasper.

The tragedy occurred as the children, off for a morning's lark with their father, were assisting in bringing to the surface a hook net. The small row boat was caught in the current it is believed, and the weight of the net caused it to capsize, throwing the five occupants into the swirling waters.

Miller and the negro were able to swim but when they looked about for the three children all had disappeared. The two men reached the bank and spread the alarm. Within a short while Demopolis people reached the scene to join in the search for the missing bodies.

The Miller family moved to the Demopolis neighborhood last January coming from Louisiana, Ky. Miller took charge of the plantation for its owner, Dr. T. C. Burgess. The bodies of the children will be sent to Louisiana for interment.

Beside the father and mother, an infant survives.

Chapter Masons are going ahead with intensive preparations for the event.

12 Years Ago TODAY

From the Daily of April 23, 1914

Mrs. D. W. Irwin, of Hillsboro, is the week-end guest of relatives in this city.

Mrs. M. A. Dinamore and children returned to Birmingham Sunday after a visit to S. D. Brock and family.

J. A. Buttrey has returned from a business trip to New York.

A. D. Jervis has returned after a stay at French Lick Springs.

Reports from the bedside of J. E. Crowe state that he is very much improved.

General Butler certainly is "telling it to the marines."

A state paper contains a letter from a friend in Florida declaring what business there is there is good.

Up at Albany, Ala., a fox acted inconsistent and chased the hounds. Oh, well. Every dog has his hard day.—Dathan Eagle.

There is something wrong about this Nashville situation. Newspapers report the presence of a movie star in the Tennessee capital, but insist he has been dodging reporters.

WHITE BELIEVES IN TAKING TIME BY THE FORELOCK, ASKS VOTES EARLY

William L. White, of Birmingham, has written a record deserving of a place in the political annals for all time.

Mr. White, it appears, is a candidate for the legislature from Jefferson county. Like all candidates, he naturally believes he will be elected. His ambitions, however, run past the election to the state-law-making body. Mr. White would enjoy serving the next house as speaker.

With that idea in view he has written a letter to the 223 legislative candidates, who likewise think they will be elected, asking these candidates to give him their vote for speaker. On the theory that the "early bird gets the worm," Mr. White may practice now answering to the salutation "Mr. Speaker."

ATTORNEY GENERAL DAVIS BEGINS WAR ON SALE OF MALT EXTRACTS

Attorney General Harwell G. Davis has begun an examination of the sales of malt extracts which he believes are used largely in the manufacture of "home brew." The state official goes at his problem in a most direct way. He does not, in advance of investigation, charge that all sales of malt extract, or even the majority of them, are used because of a demand from persons who desire to utilize the products unlawfully. He withholds his verdict after he has had an opportunity to probe the reports which have reached him.

His investigation will have the sympathy of most Alabamians. If these extracts are used illegally, and if there is a law which would prevent their sale, it would be only right that the sales be halted.

Attorney General Davis seems to have done the right thing again.

PAN-AMERICAN OIL COMPANY WILL LOCATE DISTRIBUTING STATION HERE

The announcement that the Pan-American Oil company, which lately entered Alabama, has selected Albany-Decatur as a point for their wholesale distributing plant, is further evidence that outside interests cannot but recognize the advantages the Twin Cities offer in the matter of location. The decision of the management of the Pan-American reflects credit upon the officials charged with the selection and the Twin Cities are delighted to welcome this great oil company.

The Pan-American company, press dispatches state, plans to expend $10,000,000 in Alabama real estate. Certainly this proves the company has unlimited faith in the future of this great state.

For many years the larger oil companies have maintained distribution stations here and it was but natural that the Pan-American, when it decided to enter Alabama territory, showed select Albany-Decatur as their North Alabama distribution center.

CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION IN REGARD TO DANGERS OF ALCOHOL SHOULD CONTINUE

Inasmuch as The Daily, sometime ago, urged that the prohibition forces continue the campaign of education to show the dangers of alcohol, it is gratifying to see something of the same nature in recent appeals from dry leaders. In fact much of the same appeal is contained in a recent political advertisement.

The passage of the eighteenth amendment, unfortunately, did not end, along with legal sales of alcoholic beverages, the desire people have for them. The elimination of this desire will be brought about only as people realize fully the dangers to which they are exposed when they take alcohol into their systems.

For many years the temperance societies maintained splendid, if somewhat sporadic, educational courses in the schools. Young people were taught that alcohol was bad for them. This effort has not been continued in late years with the same degree of earnest enthusiasm which marked its earlier course.

Why not restore these lecture courses?

ANOTHER INSTANCE ON RECORD WHEN ADVERTISEMENT DID NOT PAY

Instances when advertisements do not pay are few, in fact so few, that mention of them is news. When the Jersey City establishment advertised in the press of that city that a "dollar day" sale would be in progress Tuesday, the management doubtless hoped for a good return on their investment, else they would not have made it.

Probably no one was more surprised than they when 500 women congregated about the door of the store, awaiting the opening Tuesday morning. Police reserves were called and cautioned the owners that it would be necessary to open the store at once to prevent the breaking of the show windows under the crush.

The doors were opened, but during the struggle for admittance four women were trampled and had to be sent to the hospital. The advertisement may not pay in this instance because it cannot bring back the health these women enjoyed prior to their Tuesday morning shopping tour. The incident, however, does strikingly illustrate the power of publicity and the avoid interest which thrifty women, and men too for that matter, have in the mercantile news of the day.

BEAR THE CIGARETTE TAX IN MIND, THERE IS A POSSIBILITY OF IT YET

The Daily trusts its readers will not entirely forget, between now and election day, the suggestion offered in this and other papers that a cigarette tax, in fact a tax on all tobacco, might go a long way toward defraying the extra cost of the longer term rural schools, which all candidates profess themselves to be in favor of.

Some sentiment is being aroused in favor of a tobacco tax, but the work will be slow. A great many people favor any kind of tax which does not affect themselves. Inasmuch as the followers of Lady Nicotine are numerous, it is not strange that opposition would develop to a tax which would cost probably a majority of men, and a good many women, some extra pennies.

Those who prefer to see the rural educational institutions continue their sessions for eight and nine months, instead of four and five months, even if it does cost the user of tobacco an extra cent or two on every investment of 15 or 20 cents in tobacco, will continue to hold the plan to public view, in the hope that enough people will realize its advantages to put it into effect.

FROM ARIZONA COMES A REQUEST FOR INFORMATION ABOUT ALBANY-DECATUR

In a news story published in The Daily today is told the account of a request from Arizona made to Lamar Penney, local realtor, for information about Albany-Decatur. Mr. Penney promptly asked for some of the booklets recently published by the Albany-Decatur Junior Chamber of Commerce, and will forward the information promptly to Arizona.

The pessimist may try as he may, he cannot successfully combat the fact that Alabama and especially North Alabama has the attention of the nation at this time.

Since the Junior Chamber was organized, its officials declare, innumerable inquiries have been received about the Twin Cities. Some of these inquiries may be many months in the fruiting. Some may never develop, yet it is reasonable to suppose that many of them will.

Copies of the booklet have gone not only to Arizona, but to many other sections. Some have gone to New York, the Alabama Power company sending a request for information about the Cities, to be placed on file in their New York office, which the company has opened for the sole purpose of telling the people of that city about Alabama.

Other copies have found their way into railway development channels, many have been sent to individuals. Traffic men in widely scattered sections have received them. The Twin Cities are being advertised.

In discussion sometime ago with a local banker, the write was impressed with a statement made by the banker: "I do not pretend to know why," the banker declared, "nor do I know exactly how, but there certainly must be a strong unrecurrent of favorable publicity going the rounds now in behalf of Albany and Decatur, so many inquiries are being received about the cities."

This banker long has been a resident of the Twin Cities. He knows their "ins and outs" and their "ups and downs" and has known them for sometime. He is a position to judge and it is encouraging that he recognizes, even this early in the modern development of these Cities, the trend toward Albany-Decatur.

TWO APPEALS MADE BY HEALTH BOARD ARE WORTHY OF EVERY CITIZEN'S SUPPORT

The two appeals made by the Morgan county board of health, one for funds for continuation of the preventative campaign against malaria, and the other for increased appropriation from the board of revenue, to inaugurate a campaign in the rural sections to reduce the infant mortality rate, are worthy of the support of every citizen who has the interest of his community at heart.

The health department in past years has been able, with money obtained in small allotments, to conduct limited campaigns against the mosquito, principal agency in the spread of malaria. These campaigns consist principally of oiling ponds and other places where there is sufficient water for mosquito breeding. Two years ago the mosquito was virtually unknown here. People commented on their absence, and were made more comfortable by that absence. Last year the pests were more numerous and the reason was easily explained. There was not as much money available and the work was not so widespread. In fact for a long time it was doubtful that any kind of campaign would be possible, because of the lack of money.

It is to be hoped that the people of Morgan county will not make the same mistake twice. The anti-malarial campaign should begin early in the spring to be most effective, health workers advise us. Surely with this knowledge, and the additional knowledge gained by experience, it would be as little as we could do to provide the necessary fund immediately. Let us give the "go" sign to the health workers and they will eliminate the mosquito from Morgan county this year.

Of the two proposals, however, the second is probably the more important. There is an appeal made by a helpless baby which is like no other.

Helpless to do for themselves, the babies of the rural sections of Morgan county are deserving of the tender care of every citizen.

The mortality rate for infants is about three times as high in the rural sections of this county as in the cities. There must be some reason for this alarming state, and we are assured by health workers that the principal cause is the absence, in the rural sections, of the same high standards of sanitation as prevail in the cities.

To inaugurate a safe system of sanitation will cost the county money. It will cost the individuals money, but whereas money can not bring back a single life, it may be instrumental in saving the lives of babies yet unborn.

nia, schools come first, everything else second. The city hall is perhaps one third the size of the principal high school, and as for the prison, if there happens to be one, you could tuck it away in some corner of the school where children leave their coats and hats.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS here and elsewhere in the United States will wipe out prisons as sunshine cures disease.

Times have changed, since Carlisle complained that on a long journey to Edinburgh he passed many impressive jails, not one public library. Of public schools there was then no question.

"MARKET closed strong," was the good night message of big Wall street and the little Wall streets throughout the country when business closed yesterday. Somebody bought more than 1,700,000 shares in the day and little lambs, recently frightened by the "sold-out-bulls" into throwing their stocks overboard know more in April than they did in January. As is usual with lambs.

DON'T GAMBLE, you can't win at that. Study values in stocks, real estate or anything in the United States. Buy with judgment, within your means. "Hold on, and you can't help getting richer each year than you were the year before. This is a prosperous country, these are prosperous times.

GOLF professionals say brown-eyed men and women play better than those with blue or gray eyes. John Ball has won more championships than anybody else and has brown eyes.

That may be true. However, gray-eyed men shoot better with a rifle than others. Light-eyed men—although it annoys excellent persons to say so—are the world's principle thinkers. Take one hundred of the world's really greatest men. You wouldn't find ten, probably not two among them with brown or black eyes.

NEVERTHELESS, many brown-eyed men are infinitely superior to millions of blue and gray-eyed men.

The golf statement may be explained by the fact that blue-eyed men would concentrate on something more profitable than winning golf championships. They are interesting, not remunerative.

IF ANNOYED by the statement about dark and light eyes, remember the saying, "strike, but hear me." As you think of great Americans, great names come to mind, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Edison, Lee, Andrew Jackson, John D. Rockefeller, all with blue or gray eyes.

Miss Nobody

Published by arrangement with First National Pictures Inc.

The door opened and Nan came in. She wore something gay and yellow. Mechanically she wheeled to a position between her and the door in the shadow. He didn't know what he'd say or what he'd do. But one thing he did know—Nan would not get past that door. He waited for her fury.

But she spoke quietly. "She's in there?"

He nodded. He was surprised that she didn't raise her voice. But her words, spoken in a fierce whisper, were not encouraging.

"I've suspected you were getting a bit insane. Now I know it. I'll never let her have her child in this house. I can stand much, but not that. I shall have her put out at once. She can go to a hospital. She won't put me out again."

She raged on. She didn't see, at Hardiman's back, the door opening.

"I won't stand for it. It's beastly. It's a shame, a disgrace, it's disgusting, it's impossible, it's—"

"It's a boy," said Dr. Melkeljohn.

Ears That Hear Not

THE DOOR HAD not quite closed behind the nurse, who went out with the sleepy baby after the evening visit.

Barbara could hear Nan's voice

She heard Nan's voice still. It raged with exasperation, hoarse and furious.

at the telephone in the library. She tossed restlessly in bed. Sonny was now a week old and thriving. Barbara pondered the penalties of maternity. When nurse brought the baby in, she forgot everything. Nothing else mattered. But in the long hours alone she learned the force of Malzie's words:

"I hate to think—thinkin' gives me the willies."

On a thousand different highways she visioned Bravo, swinging along—a pilgrim and a stranger. And it was Spring again.

No doubt—she came by excess of reasoning to the conclusion in which there is no reason at all—no doubt she had sinned, and had drawn her punishment. She recoiled helplessly from the idea. Here was Nan, certainly a superior sinner to herself, victorious in a world in which there were no rewards either for wrong or well doing.

Nan was dressed for the theatre. The lips glued to the transmitter were curved in a full smile.

"Yes, dear, promptly at eight . . . I told J. B. I was going to the theatre with the Graysons, and he won't expect me back until past midnight. Perhaps he'll be asleep by then, and I can stay longer."

Yes, darling, of course. He's hanging on by his toenails, but we've got to be careful . . . no fool, you know, like an old—"

Hardiman's wheel chair glided soundlessly into the room. There was a table lamp which lighted Nan at the telephone; elsewhere the room was dark. Hardiman silently brought the chair to a halt in the shadows. He took a clear and matches from his housecoat pocket and waited. Nan cooed:

"No, that's risky, dear . . . I'll have to come home, even if it's very late. We mustn't be impatient, sweetheart. . . . I told you I got Horace back to Tokio, didn't I? Leave it to Nan. . . . And it won't be long—"

Deliberately the man in the chair scratched a match. She hung up the receiver with panicky haste and whirled. For a moment she stared at Hardiman blankly. Then, unsteadily, she smiled.

"I was just phoning the Graysons," she said. "They've been telling me about the play. It's named 'The Morning After.' Isn't it too bad you can't come along?"

Hardiman let the extinguished match fall from his fingers.

"I'll be home—oh, some time soon after midnight," she continued. "Perhaps, if you're up, I'll tell you about the play."

Hardiman sat stolidly in the dark.

The phone bell rang. She jerked up the receiver and spoke brusquely:

"No, no. This is the wrong number. Wrong number. Don't you understand?"

She replaced the receiver and mopped her face. Her voice took on a pleading quality as she turned to Hardiman again.

"After all, J. B., you've got to consider me a bit. Can I help it if you're so invalid? I'm not, you know. Don't you think you're a bit selfish? And don't you think you're rather childish, sitting there and trying a silence strike? If you don't want to talk to me, say so."

There was a long silence before she spoke again. "You overheard me when you came in, is that it? Well, that was young Grayson I was speaking to. A charming youngster, young Grayson. He looks on me as an older sister. I always baby him. I suppose you thought—you imagined—oh, J. B., you'll drive me frantic!"

The phone bell rang again. There was anger and impatience in the voice in which she answered the call.

"Wrong number! Wrong number! I told you before! Don't call again!"

She returned to Hardiman. His cigar had gone out.

Barbara tossed feverishly as the wheedling voice, plaintive, querulous, angry, seductive, sang on. It rose to shrillness:

She spoke on and on. Barbara dozed. When she woke again with a start, there was the feel of midnight in the air. She heard Nan's voice still. It was ragged with exasperation, hoarse and furious.

"Don't speak! Don't speak! Let me speak! I'll tell you, if you want to know. Keep up your fool silence strike—forever! It wasn't young Grayson. It was somebody else. Somebody young and healthy. And I'm going to him—now. You can think what you like. Or don't. Think this—that I will soon be in his arms."

"Once you threw me out of the house because another girl met your eye and fancy. Well? Will you answer now? No? Well, then, I've done the same thing. I've found somebody else."

"He awaits me now. Look at me. I'm young and beautiful and alive. And you're old—and ugly as death!"

Barbara heard a door slam. Noise ended.

She waited a long time, tormented by an instinct which bade her go into the next room.

She struggled slowly out of the bedclothes. Night chill smote her limbs through the thin linen of her nightgown. She clung to the wall and made her way, groping, to the library door. She pushed it. J. B. sat before her in the wheel chair. He did not look up as she entered and came up to him.

"J. B.," she called, and touched him. She took in hers a swollen cold hand. It hung rigid from a shoulder.

"J. B. . . . It's me, Barbara!"

The room rolled like a ship in a storm. She shouldn't have left her bed. She went to the library table and drew to the light the phone book. She picked up a number into it. When she spoke again:

"Is this Mr. Petrie? . . . Mrs. Adams? . . . Oh, yes, she is, and it's imperative. . . . Mrs. Adams? This is Barbara Brown. . . . I want to tell you—it wasn't a silence strike, you know. . . . You'd better come home at once. You were talking, all night, to a dead man."

Re: Minor Infant

IT WAS THE THIRD day after the funeral and Barbara, literally, was marooned in the upper part of the big house.

Now she was reconciled to a period of imprisonment in her apartment, taking all her meals in her drawing room. They were served by a maid who did a similar service for Nan Adams, cloistered likewise in another wing of the house.

Her unnamed son was asleep and Barbara, toying with an after-dinner coffee cup and the leaves of a singularly unentertaining copy of a humorous magazine, awaited the advent of the maid with a tin of powdered milk prescribed by Dr. Melkeljohn for the baby, who slept in a crib in the adjoining room. His girl-mother thought long and deep of what might eventually come of the situation which on his death found two of the women of Hardiman's life living in the shadow of his empty throne.

When her room was entered she did not look around. The maid, she supposed, advanced across the carpet and stood behind her.

She looked up. The intruder was Nan.

Barbara was instantly alert. She rose and waved her visitor to a chair. Then, silent, she waited.

"The lawyer for the estate, Mr. Ernest Walden," began Nan, many bitter things latent in her manner, "is downstairs to see—us—you and I. We might have a talk before—one of us goes down."

Barbara nodded.

"Of course, I understand your position," continued Nan. "I don't want to be precipitate." She became uneasily carefully of speech.

"J. B., for some reason, characteristic of his failing state, wanted your baby to be born in this house. It was. That's that. Now?"

"Yes," interrupted Barbara, with a steady voice, "I can understand that you'll want me out of here as soon as possible."

"That's wording the thing harshly," Nan protested, but with relief. "If you're without funds, I'll be glad to assist you, to save scandal. I'm thinking of your welfare as well as mine."

"Undoubtedly," said Barbara, crisply. "But I shan't accept such an endowment of motherhood, if that is what you want to call it. Dr. Melkeljohn," she added with a confidence she did not feel, "offered me a position once. I can accept it now."

"Your man are loyal," said Nan, with a curious mixture of bitterness and spite.

ECZEMA
'Dries right up!'

If you just realized how easy it is to stop itchy, itching, burning eczema by simply building up the red blood-cells in your blood with S. S. S., you wouldn't waste another minute trying to do it any other way.
That's the only way to relieve irritated, broken out skin of any sort. You lack rich, red blood. Impurities are in your system. The blood is so weak it can't fight back and overcome the enemy, so the impurities break out through the skin.
S. S. S. builds the blood back—builds millions of new red-blood-cells. Eczema dries right up. Boils, pimples, blackheads, ugly blotches and irritating rashes all disappear.
Clear up your skin. Get S. S. S. All druggists sell it. The larger bottle is more economical.

Let us give thanks for our friends. How poor we would be without them.

Decatur Loses To The Athens Aggies

A ninth inning rally by the Athens Aggies spelled defeat for Decatur high school Tuesday afternoon at Athens. Decatur led the Aggies until the 9th inning. Oliver was on the hill for the Decatur club and pitched steadily until the ninth, Lanier taking his place in the last inning in an attempt to choke the rally. The hitting of Bryant was a feature of the game. Oliver struck out nine men during the afternoon's engagement. The two teams meet here on May day.

Score by innings:

Big Train Barney Wins His Third Game; John Morrison Allows Cubs Two Safeties

Sir Walter Johnson ruined himself in hurling 15 innings on opening day to defeat the Athletics, said a number of scribes in this far land. Yesterday Sir Walter held Boston to four wee hits and a single marker. The statement of the scribes seems to be a bit off color. The Boston defeat was Walter's third in four starts. All fadom wants Johnson to hang up another string of 20 victories this year and at the present clip the old veteran is traveling it seems likely that fadom's greatest wish is about to be realized.

The New York Yanks got busy on the delivery of Eddie Rummel yesterday for a total of 12 hits, winning the fracas by an 8-2 count. Babe Ruth didn't get his home run, but he did clear the sacks with a double in the fifth inning.

Ty Cobb entered the Detroit lineup for the first time this season and secured three hits, a single, a double and triple in four trips to the plate. The Tiger leader; likewise cut off numerous White Sox scoring chances, once with a one hand catch while on the dead run. Detroit won out 8-7.

Cleveland continued her winning streak, taking the Browns into camp in ten innings 5-3. Cleveland outhit the Browns 10-7.

Jughandle Johnny Morrison, former Baron, stepped into the shadows of the hall of fame yesterday, holding the Chicago Cubs to two blows and shutting them out 2-0. Johnny was on the hill against the famed Grover Alexander, but fear of fame did not cast any doubts as to the ability of the former Baron hurler.

Brooklyn defeated Boston 6-5 in a game featured by the lack of hitting on the part of Jacques Fournier. Fournier went hitless for the first time this season.

Long George Kelley delivered the Giants from a tight tussel with the Phillies Tuesday, the Giants winning 9-8. Kelly drove Ross Young over the plate in his ninth with the winning marker.

Must See Road To Understand Work

While work on the Moulton-Decatur highway is going steadily forward, it is the opinion of J. M. Hatfield, Daily Circulation chief, that people cannot understand the bulk of the project, nor the appreciation of the people in the sections the road will reach, until they go and see the actual construction. Mr. Hatfield declared that the roadway now in use is unfit for travel between 50 and 75 men are employed on the project, it is stated.
